

FRANCIS JOSEPH I SIXTY-TWO YEARS ADMISSION TO CITY

Banished As Leper, He Writes Through Attorney to Health Officers.

"NOT A BLEMISH

Letter Reviews Old Case, and Says
Man Wants to Move Residence to Cleveland, Ohio.

John R. Early came to light again yesterday after nearly a year since he was held in Government quarantine and examined for leprosy.

He wants to move from Plattsburg, N. Y., to Cleveland, Ohio, stopping in Washington, and his attorney, Egbert, has written to the Department of Public Health in Washington to avoid interference. A copy of the letter was forwarded to Health Officer Woodward today with a request for advice.

"My recent client, John R. Early, who was wrongfully charged by the Health Department of the District of Columbia with having leprosy, wishes to know whether he can safely come to your city without being in danger of quarantine, apprehended, or molested in any way."

"I assure you he has not a mark or blemish of any kind, and that the skin affection which he had in the summer of 1908 entirely subsided and disappeared over a year ago. He is a healthy man to all outward appearances."

"Do you think it would be better for him to seek work under an assumed name?"

"I was Mr. Early's attorney in Washington last December, when the Health Department of the District caused his arrest under the charge of exposing the public to a contagious disease, and I obtained his release only after a week's hard work. He never returned to the city, either then or when held in quarantine in 1908-9, for a period of ten and a half months. He did, however, have at that time a skin affection which was mistaken for leprosy. This skin trouble entirely subsided and disappeared as above stated."

In response to the request of the department of public health of Cleveland for advice as to granting to Early permission to enter the city, the Health Officer has written to the Health Department of the District of Columbia, asking for a decision.

"After a review of the Early case, we will permit the Cleveland health officials to draw their own conclusions," said Acting Health Officer F. Sawtelle today. "As far as we are concerned, however, his presence is not desired in this jurisdiction."

LEBBANG DEFENSE FAILS WITH WIDOW

Mrs. Glover Avoids All Pitfalls in New England
Murder Trial.

mony about the ownership of her house in Waltham, given yesterday, and at the previous hearings, Mr. Johnson asked Mrs. Glover:

"Didn't you mean to convey the impression that your brother Toby put some money into the house?"

"No, money never had a dollar in his life. I supported him for twenty-two years, and all the money that went into that house was mine."

"Why didn't you make that plain at the trial?"

"Well at that time—and it was a time of great trouble—everybody seemed to be after all the money, and some of them came pretty near getting it. I am not a thief, Mr. Johnson, and I don't steal from anybody. But I had all I could do to keep hold of what real money I had. It kept going and going. The exact fact is that I paid $5,000 from my own savings for that house."

Will Be Called Again.

Mrs. Glover finally dismissed Mrs. Glover, with the statement that he would probably recall her. He had evidently gotten but little satisfaction from her testimony.

Mrs. George A. Freeman, of Auburn, testified to her friendship for the Glover family and of her attendance at a football game on the day before Glover was killed, in company with the Grovers and Hattie Le Blanc.

She also described how Mrs. Glover took the announcement of the death of her husband.

Mrs. Freeman was a close friend of Mrs. Glover and remained with her at the Glover home for several days after the tragedy, having reached the Glover house about midnight on the night of the shooting.

"Mrs. Glover had been crying. She was nervous. I answered her telephone and was told from the Cousen's Hospital that Mr. Glover had passed away. I told Mrs. Glover and she said, 'Very well, thank you.' Then she arose from the chair, crossed her hands over her bosom, and appeared to faint. Then she went to her room."

"Before going she said, 'Isn't this awful?' She broke down and cried."

GENERAL CARR DEAD AT HIS HOME TODAY

Brig. Gen. Eugene Asa Carr, frontiersman and civil war veteran, died at his home, 124 Twentieth street, northwest, this morning at 11:30.

General Carr was born in Concord, N. Y., in 1836, and was appointed from New York. He graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1859.

He was promoted several times for "gallant and meritorious services" and received the Congressional medal of honor for services in the battle of "Pea Ridge," Ark.

Honorably mustered out of the volunteer service January 15, 1865. He was present at the siege and surrender of Vicksburg. He was transferred to the retired list with title of brigadier general, on February 15, 1880.

General Carr is survived by his wife and one son; he also has two brothers living. Funeral will be held from his late residence on Monday, December 5, 1910. Interment will be made, with military honors, at West Point, Va.

FRANCIS JOSEPH I SIXTY-TWO YEARS ADMISSION TO CITY

FRANCIS JOSEPH I,
Austria-Hungary's 80-Year-Old Monarch, Who Today Celebrated the 62d
Year of His Reign.

Anniversary of Emperor's Accession to Rulership of Austria-Hungarian Monarchy Observed By Popular Demonstrations of Loyalty.

VIENNA, Dec. 2.—The sixty-second anniversary of the accession of Emperor Francis Joseph, who came to the throne in the storm of tumult occasioned by the revolution of 1848, was observed throughout the dual empire today.

In every town and village of the polyglot dual monarchy of Austria-Hungary, the accession anniversary of the beloved ruler, Francis Joseph I, who celebrated his eightieth birthday in August, was observed today by popular demonstrations of loyalty and devotion.

All public and many private buildings were profusely decorated with the national colors and portraits of the venerable monarch were displayed in great number. To drums were celebrated in all the churches, and business, everywhere, was at a standstill. Patriotic exercises and military parades formed the salient features of the celebration in all larger communities.

Charities Remembered.

As usual, in deference to the wishes of the aged ruler, comparatively little money was spent for displays, while large sums were contributed to the fund for charitable and philanthropic institutions, to which the Emperor also liberally subscribed.

The official celebration in the capital included the usual receptions of the diplomatic corps, the heads of the parliaments and the diets, the members of the two cabinets, and chiefs of the army, the navy, and the various imperial departments, and of the mayor and other officials of the city of Vienna. In the morning the Emperor attended mass, and in the afternoon the customary review of the garrison ended the official part of the celebration.

Francis Joseph I was born August 18, 1830, and ascended the throne in the early winter of 1848. He is the Nestor among the world's rulers, and it is curious fact that, with the exception of the King of Greece and the Sultan of Turkey, no independent monarch reigning today was alive even when Francis Joseph became Emperor-King after the abdication of his weakling uncle, Ferdinand, during the stormy days of the revolution.

Emperor Still Hale.

Notwithstanding his advanced age, and in spite of the chain of sorrows, disappointments, misfortunes, and even tragedies which have marked his career and saddened, if not embittered, his life, the Emperor is still hale and rugged of health and capable of enduring hardships that would tax the strength of even a much younger man. Hunting in the mountains, where the nimble footed deer frequently threatened the Emperor, who has always been a sportsman, is still his favorite recreation.

The fates seem to have conspired to make Francis Joseph the most unhappy and most sorely tried of all modern monarchs. Not only did they surround him with difficulties and obstacles of a political nature which frequently threatened the stability of his throne, but they visited him with a long series of domestic misfortunes and sorrows which, deprived him of those he most tenderly loved, and loaded him down with grief and sorrow.

WAR CORRESPONDENT "COVERS" LAST STORY

Emil Dumais, Who Represented the London Times During Boer War, Told Tale of Adventure Before Death.

Physicians and hospital attendants at Casualty who for five weeks tried in vain to nurse back to health an aged man who bore every earmark of refinement and told anecdotes occasionally that marked him as a globe trotter and a gentleman of high culture, but who declined to reveal his identity until a few hours before his death, are awaiting today the arrival of his sister from Canada to complete the details of his romantic and adventurous story.

The man was Emil Dumais, soldier of fortune, war correspondent, and student of affairs.

On his way from New York to Florida he stopped in Washington to study the methods of the Department of Agriculture and he tried to work harder than his failing strength would stand. He was found by police in an exhausted condition in Massachusetts avenue, near Fourth street northwest, about five weeks ago and taken to Casualty Hospital.

Tells of Kruger.

The feeble little man gave no appearance of having been a globe trotter. At first when he told stories of Oom Paul Kruger and days he spent in the Transvaal his attendants humor him and thought him out of his head.

Any attempt to question him while he was relating these reminiscences invariably resulted in immediate silence, and physicians failed to learn even his name until a few days before his death on Wednesday.

Wail Street Market Decidedly Sick, Drops of Two Points General

Turns Weak After Strong Opening, Whole List Breaking After First Hour.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—At the immediate opening the trend of values was to a higher range. The action indicated that the liquidation had spent itself, and that the shorts realizing this condition were inclined to get in under cover. The threat of a cut in dividend of Denver and Rio Grande preferred, proved only talk as the regular distribution was ordered, thus removing one of the sore spots, as the Golds would all have been put under suspicion had the leader been forced to cut its dividend. London gave the local opening a good boost, but the advance there caused some suspicion that it was effected from this side and for a distinct purpose. Nevertheless, the list maintained a firm tone and, on the leaders, 1/2 to 3/4 of a point, with a good show of strength during the first hour, gradually losing its advantage and turning decidedly soft in the second hour.

The bears, scenting signs of renewed liquidation pounded here and there throughout the list, making headway with each slight success until they had the gains wiped out and losses established throughout the entire list, with the exception, of course, of the lower prices there was a decided increase in the volume of trading, but it was not attended with the customary rallying power. The bears seemed satisfied with their position and did not cover at all.

The buying of Steel common in the afternoon was very active and the advance from 7 1/2 to 7 3/4 was quickly made, as compared with 7 1/4, the final figure of Thursday. Union Pacific rose 1/4 and Reading a like amount. Copper and Smelting made the outside gain 3/4, these being the strongest on the list in the opening hour. Steel dropped to 7 1/2 before noon, and showed little recovery; Union Pacific to 7 1/4, and a net loss of 3/4. Much interest centered in New York Central. This old-time favorite dropped to 10 1/2, or 1/2 off. Predictions were made that a break past to 10 1/2 point would result in a slashing smash and the stock was closely watched.

Further breaks followed in the noon hour, and the declines were extended from 3/4 of a point to a good 2 points average. The bears dislodged stock orders freely, and their success brought more and more of the declines followed. From the breaks there were no recoveries up to near the close of the second hour of the afternoon. Markets were ruled rather freely and the bears from the earlier strength to the later weakness made the latter all the more marked.

Copper dropped to 6 1/2. Smelting to 7 1/2, the latter nearly 3 points loss. N. Y. C. Central passed the 5 notch and dropped to 10, a new low for the favorite. Reading dropped from 14 1/2 to 14 1/4, or 1/2 off. Pacific from 17 1/2 to 16 1/2, or 1 point loss. Steel from 7 3/4 to 7 1/2, a net loss of 1/2. The whole list followed in the aggravated break.
